Children in the party mood

Cllr Hudson with families at the party

Fun was on the agenda when Deputy Mayor Councillor Lester Hudson visited a half term party at the Shrewsbury Children's Centre in Forest Gate.

The centre in Shrewsbury Road was awarded £250 from Newham Council's Let's Get the Party Started grants programme to help things go with a swing.

Party organisers used the money to pay for supplies of paint, paper and modelling items for children to make things with. There was also a bouncy castle, face painting, food and games.

Cllr Hudson said: "Staging a community event is the perfect way to bring people together and we could support you with funding. It was good to see so many children, parents and carers enjoying themselves."

Every child gets a school place

Every Newham child is guaranteed a secondary school place in September this year, and almost 73 per cent of them got their first choice school.

Newham Council received 3,925 applications for secondary school places by the national closing date of 31 October 2013. Overall 95.59 per cent (3,752 pupils) were offered a place at one of their six preferred schools.

The small number of pupils (4.41 per cent or 173 pupils) who could not be offered places at any of their preferred schools, have been allocated alternative places at the school closest to their home that still had places available.

Councillor Quintin Peppiatt, executive member for children and young people, said: "We are delighted that so many children are able to attend their first choice school. We consistently rank amongst the best in London at finding children places in our schools. We couldn't have achieved this without the hard work of primary and secondary school staff and parents."

Careers fair is just the job

Secondary school pupils took the opportunity to meet a range of employers and training and education providers at the Newham Careers Fair.

The free event, organised by Newham Council, is in its third year. It took place at the Newham College campus in East Ham.

Workshops for Newham students included Classroom Medics run by science and health graduates. Pupils were able to take pictures of their own retinas, take blood from a fake arm, diagnose conditions using a patient simulator and use an ultrasound scanner. There was also information from employers London City Airport, the Royal Navy and Newham Council about apprenticeships.

Newham councillors Clive Furness and Alec Kellaway attended. Councillor Kellaway, executive member for business and skills, said: "There has never been a greater need for careers guidance to be promoted and celebrated in education. The fair is an opportunity to inspire our next generation as they enter the world of work."

Ruthless landlord is fined

A ruthless landlord must pay more than £25,000 after Newham Council found children living in an overcrowded, unhygienic and dangerous property that he managed.

Belal Salik Choudhury from Ilford was found guilty at Thames Magistrates Court of 24 disrepair offences under the Multiple Occupation Regulations 2006, and one offence under the Housing Act 2004.

Enforcement officers visited the unlicensed home he was renting out in Birchdale Road, Forest Gate. It was occupied by seven adults and two children.

The tenants were collectively paying £2,300 in rent each month. Communal parts of the property were in poor condition and poorly ventilated, and there was a long list of hazards putting the safety of both children and adults at risk.

Councillor Andrew Baikie, executive member for housing and customer services, said: "The gravity of the offences is reflected in the size of the fine handed out, which is the largest seen by Newham Council in a housing prosecution of this kind."

Memorial tribute to screen legend

Mayor Sir Robin Wales welcomed Princess Anne to Manor Park when she unveiled a memorial stone to screen legend Dame Anna Neagle and her award-winning director husband Herbert Wilcox CBE.

The Princess Royal lifted a Union flag from the stone at City of London Cemetery. It marks the final resting place of the stage and screen star who died in 1986 following the death of her husband in 1977.

The actress was born Florence Marjorie Robertson in 1904. She lived in Glenparke Road, Forest Gate, and later in Upton Lane. She adopted her mother's maiden name for her film career. She has a road in Forest Gate named after her.

Among the guests at the unveiling were actor Leslie Phillips, radio presenter Pete Murray and 1960s pop star Joe Brown.

Sir Robin said: "I was delighted to welcome Princess Anne to the borough to recognise the achievements of two such pivotal pioneering figures in the history of British cinema."

Spending on the things that

I read last week that the Government has set out its plan to give all pupils in England free lunches for their first three years in school because they want every infant to sit down to a healthy meal during the day. I could have told them that years ago.

Newham has been serving up free school meals to all primary school pupils since 2009. For the past two years we've been funding the programme ourselves from our own pockets after the Coalition Government ditched its part of the funding for the original pilot scheme.

The budget we agreed at our recent Full Council meeting commits us once again to spending around £5m on free school meals for all primary schoolchildren, from Year 1 to Year 6. That directly benefits around 5,000 children across 62 schools every school day.

I have long believed that funding free school meals for every primary school child is crucial as it provides vital support to children in their early years.

The evidence of our programme is overwhelming. By providing healthy and nutritious meals to our children we are supporting their attainment. And the programme also saves hard-working families more than £500 per child.

Despite being on the end of savage cuts to our funding from the Government, we think spending money on giving our young people the best start in life is the right thing to do.

Deep austerity cuts continue to cripple local councils. That's not just my opinion.

It's the view of the Council of Europe who said last week that the cuts have severely, restricted councils' abilities, to provide essential public services. It's a view that has also been strongly supported by the Local Government Association.

A key priority of the council's budget strategy over the past few years has been prioritising our spending on improving what we do. Significant savings have been made and reinvested in services residents say are important to them – but the size of the cuts to our funding in the next few years means that there have been, and will continue to be, some difficult budget decisions to take.

Newham loses £30m in grant this year, £30m again next year and approximately £20m in the two years after that. This year's budget has been balanced by making savings in senior management and support service costs and making efficiencies wherever possible.

Like you, we have been working hard to cut our cloth accordingly and stretch our finances so that we can protect what matters most to all of us.

Residents keep on reminding me that the impact of the recession means making ends meet is tougher than ever, and I will do everything I can to ease the burden.

Our budget this year freezes Council Tax for the sixth year in a

It also commits us to funding additional police officers who are tasked by us and support the excellent work done by our enforcement officers.

We've invested in Newham's Every Child programme because I am committed to helping our young people succeed. Be it supplying free school meals, helping them with their reading, supporting them to learn a musical instrument or trying a new sport,

I want them to be inspired to achieve their potential.

I want us all to be in a position where we have the skills and resources that allow us to negotiate common challenges, overcome difficult circumstances and take up the opportunities that come our way.

Playing for more than glory

School students who play a team sport are more likely to be healthier and get better grades; that's why in Newham we want every child to be a sports person. Participation in events like the Newham Mini-Games and London Youth Games can have far wider benefits than just receiving a trophy or a medal.

Around 400 young people from 25 Newham primary schools took part in the four sports that made up Newham's third Winter Mini-Games. There was strong competition to win the tournaments in tag rugby, boccia, netball and hockey.

In May, the event will be followed by the Newham Spring Mini-Games, where up to 700 young people will take part in: swimming, handball, basketball, football and gymnastics.

All winners of each competition will represent Newham at the London Youth Games, Europe's largest youth sporting event.

Newham Council is helping our young people to take part in sport and become more physically active through Newham's Every Child a Sports Person programme, which is part of the council's wider commitment to ensuring young people in the borough have the same opportunities as children in more affluent areas.

There is evidence that participating in organised sports delivers educational improvements for young people including numerical and transferable skills.

According to Sport England, boosting participation in sport can generate a variety of socio-economic benefits. Sport can make a profound and positive impact on individuals, communities and wider society. Physical activity, including sport, is linked to reduced risk of more than 20 illnesses, including cardiovascular disease and some cancers.

The Mini-Games is organised by activeNewham on behalf of Newham Council and with the support from the Langdon and Cumberland partnerships.

Touring the streets of Newham

The largest annual sporting event in the world, with more than 200 riders, 2,000 vehicles and up to 5,000 officials, is coming to the borough in July.

The third stage of the Tour de France will arrive in Newham on Monday 7 July.

The event is being brought to London by The Mayor of London, Transport for London (TfL) and London and Partners.

With millions of spectators expected to line the route, TfL has requested roadblocks are in place at major junctions along the route, as well as some diversions and restrictions on parking. These measures are expected to be in place for up to eight hours on the day starting from 10am.

The Tour will cover more than ten miles around the borough, entering from Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park, making its way along Warton Road before turning right into Stratford High Street.

The riders will then make their way along West Ham Lane, past Plaistow Station and on to Greengate Street before crossing the Barking Road into Prince Regent Lane and then through Tollgate and Stansfeld roads. The Tour will then cross the Connaught Bridge and riders will leave the borough along Silvertown Way.

Newham Council wants to ensure that residents and businesses can enjoy the event and are able to get around the borough with as little disruption as possible. The council is working with all agencies to ensure that diversions and road closures are in place for the shortest time possible.

More information from TfL about arrangements on the day will be posted on our website www.newham.gov.uk/tourdefrance or follow us on Twitter @NewhamLondon for the latest updates.

A different stroke

This month, the world's greatest aquatics centre reopened for the first time since the London 2012 Games. As the public flocked to take a dip in the same pools that have graced the likes of medalists Tom Daley and Ellie Simmonds, Newham Council made a splash of its own by announcing a £120k investment into swimming and diving at the venue in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park (QEOP) and across the borough.

The London Aquatics Centre, which sits in the Newham part of QEOP, houses two 50 metre swimming pools and hosts a variety of activities including lane swimming, family swim sessions and fun with inflatables.

The 25 metre diving pool has boards and platforms from one to ten metres, with specialised dry training facilities for divers.

The council's investment will give talented residents extra access to the swimming and diving pools at the centre. Additional money will also be invested to ensure the borough's main swimming club has access to pool time at the centre for a discounted rate.

Newham Council's four year investment aims to support talented swimmers and divers, increasing their future medal chances at national and international events.

Newham and University of East London Swimming Club representative Andrew Baxter said: "The support from Newham demonstrates a fantastic commitment to swimming in the borough and to the future of the club. For that we are most grateful."

The opening of the London Aquatics Centre brings the total of public pools in Newham to nine, rising to 11 when the new Atherton Leisure Centre opens in 2015 in Stratford.

Amy Marren, Paralympian

East Ham born Paralympian Amy Marren might have missed out on a medal at the London 2012 Games, but aged just 14 she brought home a haul of medals, gold and silver, from the 2013 IPC Swimming World Championships.

Now aged 15, she's focusing her attention on making it to Rio in 2016 and hopes training at the London Aquatics Centre will boost her chances of more medal success. She said: "Without a doubt, this is the best place to train in London. The 2012 Games were great, and it has left us the venues that we have here now, but it's also about conveying that it's not just world-class athletes that train here. It's also the everyday community, be it learning to swim, learning to dive or developing your skills."

Amy admits that her training schedule can make her feel like she's living a double life, and balancing her upcoming GCSEs with her passion for swimming can be a challenge: "I love swimming more than anything but education is as important and I know I'm not going to be swimming all my life. Eventually I want to go to university and have a good career."

A talk with Tom

Olympian Tom Daley has made Newham his home, moving to the borough so he can be closer to his new training venue, the London Aquatics Centre.

Tom thinks Newham's investment in aquatics is: "great", saying: "We need more divers, we need more swimmers and I think this is the best place you can possibly do these sports; more people involved in Olympic and Paralympic diving is all part of the legacy."

"I think it's a great thing that people are getting opportunities to learn how to dive. I was lucky to live near a diving pool in Plymouth, but lots of people don't, or don't get the opportunity to try diving. The next Olympic or Paralympic champion could be out there in Newham but they would never know unless they'd tried it."

It may be almost two years since the 2012 Games but walking into the venue still brings back memories of the historic event. Tom said: "There's always a rush of memories, especially when you walk into the changing rooms. You remember the smells, the atmosphere and that kind of stuff. It's very different now they don't have the massive wings of seating but it's beautiful."

The National Lottery Newham London Anniversary Run returns

You don't need to be an athlete to run in the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park because the National Lottery Newham London Anniversary Run is back and we have more than 1,000 free places to give away to residents thanks to Mayor Sir Robin Wales.

The National Lottery Newham London Anniversary Run takes place on Sunday 20 July. The route will take you past many of the most iconic and memorable locations in Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park, including the Velopark, Aquatics Centre, iCity, the Orbit and South Park Gardens.

This year there will be a five-mile adult run and a two-kilometre family event. We are giving away 1,000 places to the adult event (worth £23 each) and 300 places in the family event (worth £5 per person). Each family place admits up to two adults and two children.

Construction work means that this year the run cannot finish in the Olympic Stadium as it has done previously. The event will return there in 2015. If you get a place in this year's run you will automatically get priority for a free place in 2015.

Mayor Sir Robin Wales said: "The National Lottery Newham London Anniversary Run is another great example of how the council is making the legacy of the 2012 Games real by giving residents free opportunities to lead active and healthier lifestyles."

Free places are expected to go fast, so if you want one get on your marks, get set, go!

How to enter

All participants get to have a great day out in London's newest urban park with no limit on the number of spectators welcome to line the route and cheer you on. You must be aged 15 or over to take part in the adult run. You must be aged five or over to take part in the family event. To apply for your free place visit www.newhamlondonanniversaryrun.org/newham

Free places are for Newham residents only. Entries are non transferrable.

Cllr Hussain (r), Russ Wiseman (l), and Jeff Jones (second right) explain how they have been using the app to Cllr Unmesh Desai

App-y days are here

Download the Love Newham app and you can contact the council at the touch of a button.

The Love Newham app makes reporting issues to the council easier than ever before. The app can be easily downloaded onto any mobile smartphone or tablet and ensures your complaint goes directly to the right department to action.

First Avenue Urban Wilderness Community Garden in Plaistow piloted the app to support the work they are doing to improve their area.

Eighteen months ago, a group of residents approached the council about a disused piece of land in First Avenue, E13, that had become a magnet for fly tipping. Fed up with the eyesore, the group was supported by the council to create a community space and the First Avenue Urban Wilderness Community Garden took root.

The site, which houses a picnic area, raised growing beds, a small children's play area, woodland space, a pond and dog exercise area, has done more than just brighten up the area, it has brought the community closer together. The group and their neighbours have been using the Love Newham app to instantly report environmental issues to the council and further improve their area.

Councillor Forhad Hussain, executive member for community affairs (South), has been promoting the app to residents. He said: "As well as the option to report issues instantly, the app is great as it allows the council to identify hotspot areas and investigate issues to put an end to them for good."

The app in action

Lifelong Newham resident and chair of the garden, Jacquie Pringle has lived in Plaistow for 18 years. She said: "We had a problem with fly tipping. Our road is quite quiet so we used to get a lot of industrial rubbish dumped from vehicles. One day I noted a description of one of the vans and the number plate and reported it to the council, who took action.

"I found out about the app from Councillor Hussain. I was at a community clean up day and spoke to him about a dumping spot. That's when he showed me the Love

Jacquie Pringle

Newham app and how to use it. Once I got the hang of it, it was dead easy to use. I get directly to the right department and my reports are dealt with very quickly."

The Love Newham app has supported the residents' new Neighbourhood Watch Group, as they are able to report issues of anti-social behaviour to the council who investigate and take enforcement action where possible.

Jacquie said: "What we're doing here is all about encouraging people to love where they live and respect their area as if it was the inside of their own home.

"I've been promoting the app like you wouldn't believe. I'm always telling people to download it onto their phone.

"Since we've come together as a community my neighbourhood is a different place. I can't go two-feet without saying hello to someone and we all look out for our children."

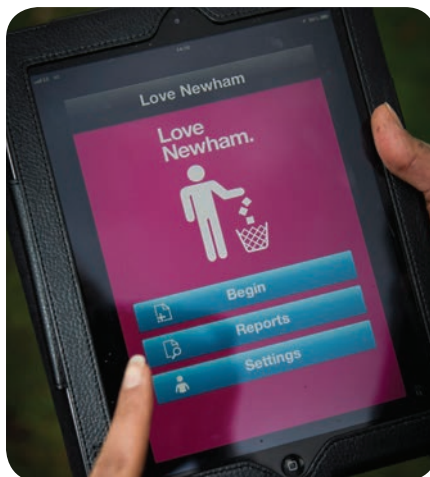

To get involved in the garden, or find out more, email urbanwilderness@live.co.uk or visit www.urbanwilderness13.webs.com

How it works

1. Download the free Love Newham app from www.newham.gov.uk/lovenewham

2. Go to the homepage and select begin

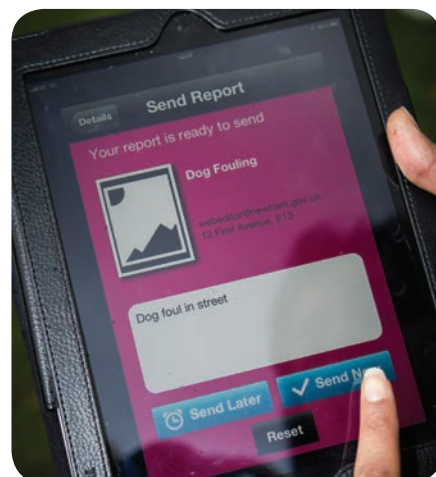

3. The app automatically detects your location to pinpoint where the problem is

4. Take a picture of the problem – you can skip this if you wish

5. Enter a brief description of the problem, e.g dog foul in street, and select the appropriate category, e.g dog fouling, and then press next

6. Send your report when you're ready

- > You will receive on screen confirmation of your report and an email to your registered email address. Newham Council will investigate the problem and let you know what's been done.
- > Records of all your reports can be viewed on the app.

What can you report?

All these issues can be reported via the Love Newham London app: alcohol-related litter; bird mess; dead animal; dog fouling; drug related litter and sex litter e.g. condoms; fly posting; fly tipping; graffiti; litter bin (overflowing); litter bins (damaged); street cleansing (sweeping); litter; oil spillage; road not gritted; gullies (blocked).

Support charity, not crime

Charity collectors are a common sight on Newham streets. When we offer money we expect it to go to those who need it most, and not into the pockets of criminals.

Most collections and appeals are legitimate and will have obtained permission from the police. However, some are scams. In some instances donations fall into the hands of organised criminals and terrorists.

On Wednesday 19 March Newham's police and enforcement officers will be handing out leaflets warning of the dangers associated with giving money to bogus charities. It offers advice to bear in mind when considering donating.

It's simpler than you might think to check the authenticity of a collector or charity:

- > genuine fundraising materials should feature the charity's name, registered name and a landline contact number. Be wary of those that list only a mobile number
- > before making a donation or accepting a collection tin, check the charity's name and registration number. You can verify this at the Charity Commission's website: www.charitycommission.gov.uk
- > look for the Fundraising Standards Board tick logo indicating the charity is signed up to fundraising regulation
- > when approached by collectors, check whether they have proper ID and that any collection tin is sealed
- > fundraisers require a licence to collect in a public place. Check they have this
- > if in doubt, ask for more information – a genuine fundraiser will be happy to explain more about the work of the charity
- > If you're unsure about donating, contribute to your chosen charity through their website.

Councillor Ian Corbett, executive member for infrastructure and environment, said: "Fraudsters will always try to exploit goodwill and attempt to deprive causes that most need help.

"It is important we support charity, not crime, and be able to give with confidence. Above all else, please don't stop supporting charities."

If you think a collection or appeal is not legitimate, report it to Action Fraud on 0300 123 2040 or inform the Charity Commission via www.actionfraud.police.uk

An alliance that works

More than 20 years ago, East London Business Alliance (ELBA) was set up to help people in east London into jobs arising from the new Docklands developments. Two decades later and the tide of economic regeneration is flowing towards Newham. As ELBA's chief executive, it's Liam Kane's job to encourage big business to look locally when recruiting so local people benefit from the opportunities on their doorstep.

Liam started at ELBA in 2002. During his 12 years at its helm, the social and economic regeneration charity has seen numbers of corporate volunteers increase from 300 to 14,000 and private sector membership increase from 30 to more than 100.

But what's at the heart of ELBA's aims? Liam explained: "We're a charity which brings business resources, and that's mainly people and time – and some money to work with the community in east London to support better prospects for residents and better regeneration."

ELBA's work is funded by an annual contribution by members. Liam said: "We are a bit of a broker. We enable corporate companies to work with the community more easily than if we weren't here."

How do you work with councils to support people into work?

We work across east London, including Newham, Hackney and Tower Hamlets. Newham Council's Workplace service is the best developed and the longest running major jobs agency. It's a great model. Candidates and clients coming in are treated incredibly professionally.

Jobcentre Plus has got tremendous pressures on it and can't quite give the time we all hope it could, Workplace fills that gap. Research shows that only one in ten unprepared candidates in east London going into an interview gets a job. That number rises to seven in ten if they go in prepared. Workplace plays a major part in that preparation.

How does ELBA support Workplace?

We run programmes for Workplace like Take Off into Work at London City Airport. We also provide jobs and training.

Our pre-employment training ranges from three days to two weeks and we offer work placements of up to six weeks. The people who come on our scheme stay on benefits during that period, which means that they don't lose out financially. They are guaranteed an interview at the end and they have a more than 80 per cent success rate of getting the job.

How does ELBA engage with schools?

We've started business advisory groups in nine Newham schools, which are sponsored by KPMG. We started out at Rokeby and developed a pilot there. We place five or six companies on a steering group which supports the head and senior teaching staff at the school. They do everything from mentoring to helping with procurement. We also do insight days at Canary Wharf where we take a year group to meet people that work there.

What new regeneration employment opportunities do you see in Newham?

We're opening discussions with the Silvertown Partnership and the ABP development by Royal Albert Dock. We see the job opportunities there and will be working with those companies and supporting them in their efforts to employ local people.

There is a willingness on behalf of the companies to employ local people. We don't go in saying: 'Wouldn't it be nice if you gave us some opportunities?'. What we're saying to them is: 'You're missing out. This is a fantastic diverse workforce. You should be maximising the number of local people you are employing'.

What do you think was the biggest legacy from the 2012 Games?

The biggest single legacy is that it raised aspiration. We set up a social enterprise, a subsidiary of ELBA called London Works; it's a graduate recruitment agency.

What we've been saying to companies is that when they limit their intake they are missing out on some really fantastic graduates from east London universities. They get that. They see the benefits of having a local workforce. Our previous graduate programmes have a 97 per cent success rate of every student getting a full-time job at the end. Now we might not be as successful as that with our new agency, but we are pretty convinced that we are going to help.

All that glitters

He's a leading urban artist, a screen actor, a classical music maestro and a drum and bass legend. We met Goldie – the man behind the teeth – as he prepared for his stage debut at Theatre Royal Stratford East in Kingston 14.

This exciting new play, set in modern day Jamaica, is being put on by the people that brought us The Big Life, The Harder They Come and Suckerpunch. It tells a story of how police corruption is uncovered after a tourist is murdered. When director Clint Dyer needed to cast a gangster, he had no doubts about who he wanted for the role – Goldie.

What attracted you to live theatre?

The great thing about this is that I haven't done theatre. I've done films – James Bond and Snatch with Guy Ritchie. Then EastEnders; I just went where my people told me to go and that was a really bad move. David Bowie told me: 'Man, re-invention is everything', so that's what I'm doing. I always saw myself as the sidekick to King Lear with a set of chrome teeth.

Director Clint Dyer said to me: 'Look, I really want you to do this gig'. The thing that convinced me was when he went: 'You're the joker, your name is Persuade Alchemist', and I'm like: 'that's what people call me. I am an alchemist'. I'm always trying to dabble in some kind of thing, whether it's music or art – that's me, I'm an alchemist.

What interested you about Kingston 14?

I've never been to Jamaica. My whole family is Jamaican, a real mad Jamaican family, but I never actually went to Jamaica. I find that quite weird and surreal.

Kingston 14's a story of corruption among the Jamaican police and outlaws. They are as bad as each other. These guys take the names of cowboys from westerns and I find that fascinating. Their hero is the cowboy, because the cowboy is the bad-man, the original gangster.

But there are some funny parts in it. There's this funny side to black society, that comes out when things are bad. It's like when the funny side of blues music comes out and makes people laugh, but isn't Macbeth and Shakespeare a little bit like that? Doesn't that have a little bit of funniness and satire?

What are your career highlights?

I think the whole Classical Goldie BBC programme was important for me. Composing and conducting a piece of classical music like Sine Tempore at the Royal Albert Hall, getting my head around Rachmaninoff, and nailing it, was great. My debut album Timeless is 20 years old this year. It's a blueprint for a great orchestral piece of music. That's something that we're looking towards doing at the Meltdown Festival this year with James Lavelle.

And I think that is kind of what theatre is to me. It's like classical music. It's the thoroughbred of what it is. If you can't cut it there then... It's that thing.

Let me tell you about conducting Carmina Burana. I had an absolute nightmare rehearsing this piece, but – I'll never forget this – I walked on stage to the podium and then in that split second – ah...it clicked. There's that moment, that knowing that comes from getting to the top of a hill. That thing where you just nail it.

“Roll in your seat, because it's funny, humorous and dark in places, but I hope I make you laugh, because it is a good play”

I think that's what I'm going to have at Stratford East. I like that edge. I think I should have done this earlier.

And what can the audience expect?

Roll in your seat, because it's funny, humorous and dark in places, but I hope I make you laugh, because it is a good play. Come and see it – it's my debut.

Do the right thing - don't rubbish where you live, don't rubbish Newham.

Newham has a great variety of places to see, people to meet and things to do. That's why we think it is important to keep our streets clean and litter free.

Newham is a fantastic place to go for a walk. Where else could you find shops serving a Bulgarian breakfast on one side of the road and a Karachi curry on the other? Slow down and take the time to enjoy where you live. Taking the time to appreciate everything that's going on around you each day is one of the best personal investments you can make. And while you are doing that take your litter home with you. Don't rubbish where you live, don't rubbish Newham. Litter doesn't have to be part of the modern world. Protect what is good in your life and help keep Newham clean.

The pictures on this page show people who are responsible for dropping litter and other forms of anti-social behaviour. If you recognise anyone please call 020 3373 4479 and quote the reference number beside the picture.

Poem

New Beginnings

Time for new beginnings,
Fresh starts,
Following the winds,
Forget star charts,
Let them be binned,
Ride into the sunset,
No sign, being disciplined.

Eyes wide with joy,
Our hair flying behind,
Bold, like Helen of Troy,
Change your frame of mind,
No time to dwell,
On the past – be gone,
Forget the times we fell,
Now our hearts, as one.

Let us seek the future,
So bright like the sun,
Enjoy our youth,
Just have some fun,
Throw your head back and laugh,
Don't care 'bout anyone,
It's time to enjoy,
The world we shall stun.

Let us stand tall,
Stand with pride,
Nose in the air,
Head up high,
Eyes so bright,
Dreams in the sky,
Waiting to come true,
But till then, goodbye...
